

INFORMATION SECURITY (INFOSEC) AWARENESS

Get everyone on board for good.

As information-sharing increases, our appreciation of the value and risk involved is increasing too. As such, user awareness has become essential to robust infosec within your organisation. But how do you foster a culture wherein your employees act securely at all times, the same way they do at home? No two organisations are alike, so there isn't one answer. The goal, however, is always the same: to implement a change in culture and make sure it sticks. And the best way to do this is through a formal, purpose-built programme.

Broadly speaking, an infosec awareness programme focuses on the value you place on your organisation's information assets, and the risk associated with that information. The programme then helps protect these critical assets from theft and misuse by creating and maintaining requisite custodianship over them.

And so to specifics. The Mobius approach is highly practical, with an end-to-end life cycle that ensures infosec awareness becomes hardwired into your organisation. Exercises such as live hacking and phishing quickly demonstrate to your individual users the everyday risks they face, simultaneously showing how to guard against them. Our approach is also very flexible, and based firmly on your business's maturity level with regard to managing information risk.

By the end, your employees will be fully empowered to understand and react appropriately to infosec risks - both real and potential - cementing compliance with your own policies, standards and security strategy.
